

Ono Shiritsu Kokokan (Ono Town Hall) : Western-style auditorium built in the early Showa Period

Ono Shiritsu Kokokan

“Big Hinamatsuri” event
(Doll Festival)

Ono Shiritsu Kokokan stores and exhibits various materials relating to the city's history, geography, and culture. In the experiential-corner of the hall, visitors can play with toys from the olden days, and in the video corner, they are introduced to Ono City's history and culture through a video. The teahouse “Yanagi Futei” can be found inside the grounds. By experiencing traditional Japanese culture through the tea ceremony, visitors can get a taste of the Japanese aesthetic sense of Wabi-sabi (the beauty of quiet simplicity and subdued refinement).

While the interior has been modified, the exterior appropriates Ono Elementary School auditorium. Built in 1936, the auditorium has a steel frame, and the roof is gabled with slate tiles. The exterior incorporates western-style architecture, such as the windows which are circular at the top and vestibule ornamentation imitating pillars. It is an important local scenic resource that has been designated an important building for the formation of beautiful townscapes (2006).

The Jodo-do Hall (The Pure Land Hall) of Jodo-ji Temple was built during the Kamakura Period during 1192-1197 using a Buddhist architectural style called Daibutsu-yo (also called Tenjiku-yo or “Indian style”) that Chogen Shonin (Saint Chogen) employed in the reconstruction of Nara’s Todai-ji Temple. It is a precious building designated a national treasure. Within Jodo-do Hall are the Standing Statues of Amida Triad (designated a national treasure) by Kaikei, a renowned sculptor of Buddhist statues.

In the spring, the cherry blossoms are in full bloom within the temple precincts, which together with Jodo-do Hall, create an elegant atmosphere. Approx. 10,000 hydrangeas grow in the mountain behind the temple, a forest path has been established for pilgrims on the Shikoku Pilgrimage (88 temples of Shikoku), and one can also explore 88 Jizo stone statues that were made in the Edo Period (Bodhisattva who looks over children, travelers and the underworld).

Himawari-no-Oka Koen (Sunflower Hill Park) : An idyllic rural landscape and seasonal flowers

Sunflower Tower

Hana-no-komichi (Flower Lane)

Cosmos field

Sunflower field

Wanpaku Playground

This park opened on April 21, 2002 as a place where one can rest leisurely within a natural environment all day long, irrespective of your age. Approx. 8ha of hilly ground along Japan National Route 175 has been prepared for the park which receives approx. 700,000 visitors annually.

An idyllic rural landscape and the setting sun can be viewed from the Sunflower Tower which is the park's symbol. In the farmland in front of the park, approx. 340,000 sunflowers (the municipal flower) bloom in the summer, while cosmos flowers carpet the fields in the fall. The Flower Lane is lined with seasonal flower beds and the large-scale grass field is a multipurpose field for playing soccer and for recreation. The Wanpaku Playground is outfitted with large playground equipment.

Ono Alps

: Mt. Beniyama, Mt. Ono Fuji, and nature-rich satoyama-rin (community-based forest)

Walking route during the autumn colors

Overlooking Ono City from Mt. Beniyama

Mt. Ono Fuji seen from Mt. Beniyama

Looking far to the west from JR Onomachi Station, one can see Ono Alps at a distance between the homes interspersed by a verdant mountain range. They are the peaks of the Beniyama mountain range popularly known as Ono Alps. Ono Alps which spans approx. 14.7 km in an east-west direction and sandwiches what is commonly known as Mt. Ono Fuji (Mt. Soyama, 198.9m) was named by local hiking enthusiasts. It is popular among mountain climbers during the cherry blossom and the autumn leaves seasons.

The view from Mt. Ono Fuji which is the highest peak of Ono Alps, includes precipitous rock cliffs and the calm flow of Kakogawa River and its branch streams, and on a sunny day one can see a natural panorama which includes Akashi-Kaikyo Ohashi Bridge and Awaji Island. Ono Alps extends from Fukudencho, Ono City to “Hakuundani Onsen Yupikama,” and you can enjoy several hiking courses such as “Beniyama Tozan Course,” “Intermediate Course,” and “East Course.” These trails which are accessible even by beginners and families will afford more thrills than you bargain for.

The satoyama-rin (community-based forest) “Kisumi-no-Miharashi-no-Mori” outfitted by the “Hyogo Bountiful Forest Building Scheme” can be found in the vicinity. Kisumi-no-Miharashi-no-Mori has three hiking trails that will allow you to fully enjoy the ever-changing natural scenery. In the spring, resplendent azaleas bloom on the forest trail along the mountain ridge.
